

support and cooperation. If I had to summarize what they stand for I would say that 'they are to the point, clear, active, and honest'."

"It has also brought a lot of extra media attention."

Although Mr. Fiddlers didn't want to comment on any amounts received from the Han Yang Ling Museum, he did admit that payments were on time. "No hassle whatsoever," he said. "Chinese are nice folks. One of the things I found remarkable while I was at the site in Xian was that there were plenty of people working. Also, despite the fact I couldn't speak their tongue, communication went well and let me tell you, once more, that I am very delighted with this project that is our biggest assignment so far."

It has brought a lot of extra media attention. "We not only attract more and more Chinese visitors to our website, we also get plenty of requests from Chinese universities and schools. Moreover, Glass Consult recently agreed on taking on more projects in Egypt and Greece - all in the archeological field - and we are momentarily negotiating with Sheiks from Dubai to set up a factory in this Middle Eastern oil state. We are clearly expanding."
